MAYBE USED AS NAVAL BASE

Severest Town Certain to be of Strategic Value to Tentative Possibility as a Base for Submarines: Allies Hold. Their Own in the Big Battle.

By Associated Press.
LONDON, Oct. 17.—German forces, as was predicted, have occupied the town, near the sea, where the German right wing and the allies left are struggling in the latest phase of what was once the battle of the Aisne.

Reports reaching London say that German imagination has been fired by the capture of Ostend and the cry now is not only "on to Calais," but "on to Boulogne."

What progress, if any, the Germans have made since they entered Ostend Thursday morning is not known here, but their next objective apparently is Dunkirk.

Optimism in England seems to differ as to what part the British fleet would play should the battle continue to skirt the coast line.

Reports that British dreadnaughts would back up the French, British and Belgian forces from the straits of Dover seem to originate in German sources.

London papers generally depreciate the importance of the German occupation of the Belgian coast, pointing out that the British main effort prevents the enemy bringing ships to operate from the home to Spanish harbor of Ostend. The fort remains, however, that at the fighting area, geographically nearer to England, the people here are discussing and speculating on a Zepplin raid is bound to ask itself, "What will come next?"

It is unquestionably true that if Germany is able to capture submarine bases from a base further away, instead of held by the invaders currently, would be of some strategic value.

The allied left holds its ground. At some points it is even moving forward, but it is not in the direction of the German left in the direction of the allied right.

The German left has been driven out of the line, but this has not been confirmed. The presence of the Germans has been reported recently within a mile of the allied line, but this has not been confirmed.

CAN'T FOOL THE PEOPLE TWICE.

The Democrats realize that the prevailing business depression, following upon their promises of lower living costs and greater prosperity, has shaken public confidence in their ability to govern the country wisely, and they feel the need of explaining away, if possible, their responsibility for this terrible failure.

The explanations offered are numerous and varied. President Wilson, for example, is inclined to think there is no depression. He tells us that the hard times are merely a state of mind, that is to say a psychological condition.

In the Connellsville coke region, and other industrial centers of the country, this explanation is not satisfying, and a persistent effort has been made to blame our conditions upon the European war. Unfortunately for this explanation, however, the coke trade had arrived at 50% capacity before the war began, and this ratio had likewise been attained by the furnaces and steel mills of the country. The war has made little or no difference thus far in these industries.

It has remained for the daring and intrepid ballyhoo artists of the barefoot press of Fayette county to cut the Gordian knot with one happy stroke. They declare that the manufacturers and the railroads are deliberately and designedly depressing business in order to elect Penrose and Crow. The reduction of wages by the Cambria Steel Company is attributed to Penrose, and the statement is made that Crow is trying to induce the merchant coke interests of the Connellsville region to reduce wages just before the election for the political effect such action may have.

This is adding insult to injury. The Democrats by their tariff act and other ill-advised legislation, and their constant nagging at business in order to meet what they regard a popular demand for corporate regulation, have brought about a bad business condition which has been aggravated by the paralysis of commercial credits abroad caused by the European war.

The Democrats FOOLED THE PEOPLE ONCE when they promised them INCREASED PROSPERITY and handed them HARD TIMES; but the Ballyhoo Boys can't fool the people of Fayette county again by such impudent mendacity as is contained in THE ABSURD CHARGE THAT BUSINESS MEN ARE DELIBERATELY TRYING TO RUIN THEMSELVES, AND TO REDUCE THEIR WORKMEN TO POVERTY AND DISTRESS, IN ORDER TO PROMOTE THE CANDIDACY OF A FEW ASPIRANTS TO PUBLIC PLACE.

TWO LADS ATTACKED BY FOREIGNERS IN THE WOODS

Sons of Samuel Hittorff Have an Exciting Experience at South Connellsville.

Brutally attacked by two foreigners, Emerson and George, two small sons of Constable Samuel Hittorff of South Connellsville, were rescued when their father heard their screams and hurried to their assistance.

The boys had gone to get kindling wood in the woods near the Hittorff farm last evening. They were surprised by two men who killed Emerson, who is but nine years old, to the ground. The other man took the boy's ax, threatening to kill George, aged 14. The latter, however, put up a plucky fight and succeeded in ripping him. In the meantime, Emerson broke loose from his captor and fled, screaming for help. His father heard his cries and ran to the scene.

His sons assailants were fleeing into the woods by this time and although two shots were fired at them, neither took effect.

The attack took place near the De Haven farm. The boys claim that the men came up and attacked them without provocation. They were both foreigners, they say.

CAMPAIGN SIDELIGHTS

In its desperation to explain a cause of the financial depression that will let the Democrats out, The Daily News advances the statement that "it is estimated 2,500 men departed from this region (to join the European armies involved in the war) and that they carried with them an average of $500 each."

The News knows better. Its own reporters chased the "foreign exodus" story for weeks following the breaking out of the war. They learned that practically none of the coke region foreigners returned to their native land. The foreigners couldn't have gotten back if they wanted to, because the steamship companies wouldn't take them.

A banker, who is a Democrat and who practically owns the coke region, Sterling-Higbee-McGinnis Democrat, was asked if he thought 2,500 foreigners left the region to join the European armies. There is a foreign department connected with his bank, so he is in a position to know whether there was a large exodus. "Did 2,500 foreigners leave the coke region?" he was asked.

"Great Scott, no," he replied. "Nothing like that number." "Would a few hundred cover it?" was the further question. "Yes," he replied. "They can cover it."

The story of an exodus of the 2,500 foreigners from the coke region is on a par with the balance of the political rot the Democrat organ is wishing on the public.

The brass buttons for American soldiers' uniforms have been made in England under contract awarded by the Democratic Secretary of War and Democratic Secretary of the Navy.

Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors wear a lot of brass buttons. Some of them have two double rows down the front of their uniforms. Then, there are army and navy ornaments, shoulder-straps and other kind of official insignia.

Uncle Sam spends from sixty to seventy thousand dollars a year for brass and bronze buttons. In the "basket clause" of schedule G, of the Democratic tariff law, the duties on these buttons was reduced from 32 per cent to 15 per cent, ad valorem.

As soon as this cut was made, an English firm entered competition for the button contract and because of cheap labor was able to underbid the American manufacturers who had handled the contract satisfactorily for several years and had given employment to hundreds of men in the manufacture of American buttons for American soldiers.

New England manufacturers naturally made a big protest. No attention was paid to this until the protest became so strong Democratic Senators and Congressmen from New England used their influence to get the contract to the British firm cancelled and then it was given up on the ground that unsettled conditions made delivery uncertain. Thus, the war was a very present need in time of trouble to the Democrats.

"The announcement that Senator W. E. Crow will address a meeting at the public house soon * * * is the best news his campaign opponents here would care to hear. It would be just their opportunity to catch him and surely they would fly him to a ditch," says the Connellsville News.

The News believes the proper way to conduct a campaign is to make public speakers hysterical to the point of desperation in the face of impending defeat. The News would like to see a public gathering to add to the unwelcome news.

A public meeting is not necessary, however. Candidates for office have the right to be heard, and to present their arguments to the public in any manner they elect. The Court recognizes that fact, and for that reason would have been the first to protest against any effort to disturb either the Democrats or the Bull Moosees during their platform engagements here. Mr. Palmer, Mr. Finchot and other candidates obtained a respectful hearing. Is the News so cowardly of Senator Crow's convincing arguments that would he dare to his meeting rather than permit the voters to hear him?

WOMAN BLOCKS CAR.

Stands on Tracks and Prevents Trolley From Passing.

A West Side woman, apparently demented, created excitement on Main street this morning when she stood on the trolley tracks on the Young bridge, effectually blocking a car. Leaving against the railing of the bridge, she made it impossible for the motorcar to continue without running her down. She was finally induced, however, to get out of the way.

The woman refused to walk on the sidewalks and at city hall she took a notion to board an automobile parked there, but changed her mind and went down to Water street where she created a disturbance in one of the hotels.

REPUBLICANS PAN STERLING AT BIG DUNBAR MEETING

H. K. MacQuarrie Riddies
His Pretense of Reform.

ROUSING RALLY HELD THERE

Much Enthusiasm is Apparent at the Opening Meeting of the Campaign: Busy Day Planned Today in Many Parts of County; Rally at Dawson.

The first Republican rallies of the campaign were held in Dunbar and North Union township last evening. They were largely attended by enthusiastic voters and the speakers were received with enthusiasm. At Dunbar the Colonial Theatre was packed and in North Union township the Park Amateur Athletic clubhouse was also jammed.

The principal speech at Dunbar was made by H. K. MacQuarrie, Attorney MacQuarrie has been active in reform work in Fayette county for some years. Before his admission to the bar he was the representative of a reform organization which was at that time fighting for the uplift. He knows what has been going on and he told the voters a few things about the sham reformers who are now preaching the purity of Democracy.

Mr. MacQuarrie declared that he would never have taken the stump except for the vilification of Senator Crow. Mr. MacQuarrie said that this campaign contrasts about two men, Senator Crow, on the Republican side, and Bruce Sterling, on the Democratic side.

"Mr. Sterling is masking now in reform. What do you think of that Mr. Sterling a reformer?"

"Can you for one minute imagine Bruce Sterling and his associates as reformers?"

That Congressman Palmer's attacks on Senator Crow last Saturday night was a glittering generalization was pointed out by Mr. MacQuarrie. The speaker said that he would point out definite facts to show the methods of the pseudo reformers in the Democratic party. He cited that three men, reputable citizens of Fayette county, by their testimony had revealed that the House of Representatives checked out of $50,000 by its associates following Judge Umble's last judicial campaign.

Mr. MacQuarrie told of the attempt in the early spring of H. S. Dumbauld and John S. Christy to have D. M. Hartman become a candidate for state senator. He told the story of Hartman refusing to become a candidate at that time, and of his later refusal to be the fusion candidate. Mr. MacQuarrie declared that Bruce Sterling and Mr. Hartman held a private conference a week before the last legislative committee meeting and discussing that private conference Hartman agreed to run for senator.

"A vote for Hartman is a vote for Bruce Sterling," said MacQuarrie.

MacQuarrie called attention to the fact that during the legislative session of 1907 Bruce P. Stuchlik, a senator, had been charged with having asked a friend "if it was wrong for him to accept $500 for making the speech." As to Attorney Higbee's efforts to purge the voting lists in an effort to "reform" the county, MacQuarrie called attention to the fact that Higbee fought for Judge Umble in the audit case from the lowest to the highest court in an effort to prevent an audit of the judge's campaign accounts, which, it was charged, would have exposed the corruption of the electorate.

As to the workmen's compensation, which the Democrats are now charging Senator Crow with defeating, MacQuarrie called attention to the fact that Sterling's satellites in the Legislature at the last session voted against the measure. James J. Keegan voted for the bill and because of his independence, the Sterling machine denounced him at the recent primaries.

Ellis Goodrich, clerk of Courts Richard Davis and former District Attorney David W. Henderson delivered ringing addresses. Dr. J. J. Muller presided at the meeting. The vice presidents were: M. V. E. Scott, M. B. Pope, William Bowden, Jr., George H. Swadlow, Dr. Samuel Dows, William C. Smith, Antonio Bufano, Howard Clark, C. D. Kimball, Frank Wilhelm, Alex. Duncanson, J. M. Burdman, Grant Hay, J. D. Ellenberger, Joseph Barnes, William Brann, Scott Franks, Michael White and James DeGee.

Trooped by County Superintendent of Schools Curran playing a life, a drum corps played in front of the Dunbar House early in the evening.

Today was a busy day for the Republicans. This morning they held a big rally at Point Marion. This afternoon they are at Smithfield. The big meeting of the day will be at Mason-town. State Senator Crow, Robert F. Hopwood, Thomas S. Crago and Judge H. H. Ruppert are to be among the speakers.

There will be a big meeting tonight at Dawson. The Connellsville Military Band has been engaged. There will be a parade from Vanderhill, through Dickerson Run, to Dawson. The meeting will be held in the opera house. Dr. H. J. Bell will preside. The vice presidents are J. M. Murland, Harry Landenburger, J. F. Black, William R. McCluskey, C. C. Field, J. H. Short, Cyrus Hettler, William O'Neil, K. R. Brown, John Ramsell, William H. McDonald, Earl S. Porter, Charles O. Schroyer and Ray Neville.

The Correct in Corsets

Time has wrought many changes in the corset business. In the long ago almost anything that bore the name of "corset" would answer for the average woman. Now things are entirely different. Corsets must fit, and fit properly—and corsetry has become a science. Womanhood must have the proper figure, and where Nature has failed, these defects must be corrected—and nothing is more essential than a properly constructed corset—even then in many instances the very best makes will not answer without alterations and to make these necessary changes require a skilled hand, one with experience in the art—for at it is—such an one we have secured in Miss H. C. Wright, of New York, who is fully experienced in making the most difficult alterations, and the women of this city may feel sure of correct fitting if they will come and advise with this lady. We have added new makes of corsets which are up-to-the-minute in every respect, and are amply prepared to fill the needs of any and all in the matter of corsetry. We especially invite you to visit our second floor and interview Miss Wright regarding your needs in corsets.

MOUNT PLEASANT

Special to The Courier
MOUNT PLEASANT, October 17.—The joint meeting of the parents and teachers at the high school building last evening was a success. Ninety parents whose children were students of the high school building were present. Promptly at 8 o'clock they began their discussion of the report on the following teachers' report on the preceding year: Misses Wallace, Gross, Stewart, Yarnall, Galloway, and Messrs. Barr and Kimpelman and Professor Gordy. The parents who had not met the teachers were introduced.

Rev. T. C. Harper made an address on "What the Home Expects of the School to Do for the Boys and Girls" and said that it should train them for citizenship, as the church did not have the opportunity that the school did. Above all he stated that it should teach them discipline, make them self-thinking and have perfect control. He used manual training and domestic science to illustrate this point. He said that it should teach them respect and patriotism and that the boys should be good men and women, careful of their language and habits.

Miss Galloway gave a most excellent address on "What the Teachers Are Trying to Do" and she said the teachers were trying not to teach mere facts but to have the pupils use their reason and learn to live in harmony with mathematics and literature. Most of all she strived to teach them mental development, to prepare them for life and the problems that constantly arise before them. Miss Yarnall gave a talk which appealed greatly to the parents on "Succession for the Proper Attainment of Home and School" in which she stressed the need for more regular attendance and a definite time and place of study. Above all she presented the parents should take up their troubles with the teacher and thrust it out rather than concerning themselves and making things about her that if the parents knew the facts they would be ashamed to say. She urged that the parents visit the schools frequently.

Every member of the board of education and a representative of the American Legion were present. The meeting was held in the high school building under the direction of Prof. J. Hunter Canale who was greatly appreciated and added much to the pleasure of the meeting. Following the business meeting, a refreshment was served from the domestic science room by the students. The question box was not used. A prize was awarded to a visit to the West Meadow street home of Connellville Bank Trust when he was not at home. The other members of the board were present. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Leonard.

OHIO MINERALS

Output in Ohio is valued at More Than $121,000,000.

Ohio ranks fourth among the states in the value of mineral products according to the United States Geological Survey. The total value of the mineral production of the state increased from $11,622,565 in 1912 to $121,000,000 in 1931. It is the premier state in the value of clay products and in the value of coal, gravel, sand, and petroleum. It is second in the production of bromine and third in the output of calcium chloride, natural gas, salt, and sand and gravel, and exports fourth in the production of rock, asbestos, earth clays, and glass, and seventh in quantity and sixth in value in the production of petroleum.

Ohio ranks next to Pennsylvania and second in the country in the manufacture of pig iron, and if pig iron is taken from one source, Ohio would rank second in the total value of mineral products which would be increased in 1931 by nearly 90 per cent. The value obtained if the iron is excluded. Practically all the pig iron produced in Ohio, however, is produced from Lake Superior ores and is shipped to other states. The value of the iron ore which the state has produced is $1,000,000. The two leading products of Ohio are coal and clay products, and have increased in value in 1931 and 1932 where in 1931 the value of the products exceeded that of coal. The production of coal in 1931 increased from 2,207,527 short tons in 1930 to 2,207,527 short tons in 1931, the output with an increase of 100,000 tons being the maximum in the state.

PHANTOMS.

Democratic phantom reformers have had a great deal to say about Republican phantom voters in this campaign, but it looks as if the Conneltsville phantoms were very real.

In fact it is so evident that the names sought to be stricken from the registry lists in Conneltsville are names of real voters, many of them old citizens, that the action of the Democratic organization in attacking them casts a doubt upon the good faith of all its previous work in this line. It begins to look as if this much-heralded Democratic reform was a sham and a pretense, a mere cloak to conceal a sinister design. In the name of public virtue the Democrats are suspected of seeking partisan advantage.

The names enrolled in the townships are names of Republicans who may or may not be entitled to vote, but the wholesale manner in which these names have been stricken from the lists by Democratic authority on Democratic complaint smacks of the recklessness with which it is allowed they were put on, and raises the question whether this proceeding is not far more than truthful, that is to say whether it is not a mere shifting of the burden of responsibility on the part of a citizen actually entitled to vote from a presumption in his favor to a presumption against him.

It will be borne in mind that, except in Conneltsville, the presence of a man's name on the registry list does not entitle him to vote nor does its absence deprive him of that right. There has been much talk about these proceedings, but up to this time no party nor any person has been convicted of actual election frauds.

We have not had any PHANTOM VOTING yet, but we have had lots of PHANTOM DISSENT on the part of PHANTOM REFORMERS seeking the substantial rewards of office.

FALSE PROPHECY.

General Harmony Hughes' Conneltsville News says: "The prophets of prosperity are defeated, the vote-buying business in Fayette county will be pretty effectively broken up." The Democrats prophesied that the cost of living would be reduced under their wise tariff policies, and thereby the prosperity of the people, already abundant, would be further enhanced. The people have hoped therefore, the Democrats are false prophets and, if they are defeated, it is probably true that the vote-buying business will be pretty effectively broken up. Attorney General Harmony Hughes' organ is sometimes speaks the truth, inadvertently.

The Democratic organs harp on the hard times brought about by the European war, yet the agents of the belt-makers are buying everything imaginable in this country from horse shoes and harness to buttons and blankets. If it were not for the war, there would be worse times ever. The Democratic tariff is the prime factor in our Democratic times.

A commission form of government is suggested for Mexico. The Congress is Progressive.

"Who men indignant at our people's loss," reads a big black headline in the Canton Standard. They are not the only people who are indignant, either. There's a day of reckoning coming.

Life has been just one thing after another for Conneltsville's first city detective since he departed from our midst.

The Hon. Bruce Corbould Sterling and General Harmony Hughes have thrifly divided the honors at Harrisburg among themselves. Hughes is to be Secretary of the Commonwealth and Hughes is to be Attorney General under Governor Vance McCormick. It's a fine plan, but McCormick is not elected, and he is not likely to be.

The Dumbard traveling was hot stuff.

The campaign in Fayette county has actually begun, without the aid or consent of the Wicked Elder.

The Associated Democratic Phantoms are getting some free advertising.

The Hallsboro boys thought they had the Republicans bluffed to a silence, but the latter have apparently just begun to talk.

If Ammanas came to Fayette county he would be glad to get a job as devil to one of the barefoot organs.

The first step toward prosperity to this country will be the election of the Republican ticket, especially the Congressional portion of it, which includes Senator Patterson and "Ho" Hopwood.

The nodina to the Pacific Coast has begun with Conneltsville well to the front of the procession.

Connellsville will have a sane and sane Halloween despite the prevailing insanity of politics.

Detailed report of the coke trade for the week ending Saturday, October 8, shows a total of 21,230 cars in the region, of which 18,000 are active and 3,230 are idle, with an estimated production of 218,000 tons.

Shipments for the week aggregated 10,169 cars, consigned as follows: To Pittsburgh, 3,745 cars; to points west, 5,039 cars; to points east, 1,385 cars. A falling off in demand and a shortage of water causes a slight decrease in coke production.

THE ZEPPELINS

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Sighs."

War is a terrible thing and we should be glad that the Zeppelins are not adding greatly to the horrors. For several years the world has shuddered when it thought of these giant war craft sailing silently through the heavens and dropping bundles of dynamite as big as haystacks upon their victims. It was felt on all sides that when a Zeppelin got nearby at a nation and began blowing large, three-cornered holes in it, that nation would have to surrender before the overtire was completed. It was believed that one Zeppelin with a few stern orders should reduce a fleet to undisciplined remains, blow the dome off of St. Paul's and make a noise like the Nihilist conventions in the vicinity of the czar's palace.

Happily these fears seem to have been greatly exaggerated. The Zeppelin has been maligned. It may be large and stern looking, but it is not cannibalistic. Next to sailing aloft with a full charge of gas and phosphorus, the Zeppelin seems to like best to come down to earth with a hollow thump and remain there permanently.

The Zeppelin is as long as a steamship, but when it is shot in the thorax it has no more vitality than a duck. Europe seems to be full of marksmen who can take a Zeppelin for granted and feel enough of a Zeppelin for a man with a few well-directed shots.

The horror of the dirigible seems to be visited solely upon the horses who have to go poking around the zenith in them without a parachute.

Many weeks have now elapsed since the giant Zeppelins were first unbalanced upon the foe, and the capitals of Europe still stand. We are glad this is so. War is bad enough when conducted on foot. The sky should belong to the dove of peace. It is about the only place left for the poor bird anyway.

FETCHING NOVELTIES IN FURS

Extremely Fetching is this Cape of Seal With a Veil of Russian Mouse

This Shopper's Muff of Chinchilla Contains an Inner Pocket for Packages

A Charming Down Cape in the New Kolinsky Fur

Summer Ermine Though Not White Heads the List of Exclusive Pelts - Waistcoats of Contrasting Fur Give the New Fur Cape Much Style - Seal-skin Undiminished in Fashionable Favor.

ALTHOUGH winter temperature is still many weeks away—on New York and other northern cities—fur is making its appearance on fall coats and frocks, and the new fur wraps are being displayed temptingly in the furriers' windows along Fifth avenue and on Thirty-fourth street. Fur fashion is established for the coming season, and only wintry weather is lacking to make their immediate enjoyment possible by wearers.

On September thirtieth, a perfect summer Sunday with cloudless skies overhead and gentle breezes wafting from the South—a day when white frocks were comfortable out of doors, and folk in the country were disposing of trunks, coats and golf links—the average countess, dowager or more well-dressed woman wearing furs on Fifth avenue, between the Waldorf and the Plaza, that is, smartly dressed, and in the hands of fur at collar and cuffs and stunning new redingotes, belted and falling below the knee, were finished at the neck with fur collars of seal, skunk and the new Siberian mink, or kolinsky. Very uncomfortable these fur wearables must have been, and one could not disagree, either, that they looked modish, so exceedingly oppressive and summery was the day. But to what lengths will not women, intent upon being in the vogue of the fashion, go to achieve their ambition? Surely, fur on a mid-summer afternoon are no more inconsistent than straw hats and pumps in February, when pneumonia lurks around every corner in the chilling blasts that sweep up from the river?

Chilling blasts, however, will very soon be on their way now. October is almost half gone and the next two weeks will be the busiest of the year in retail fur houses. Anybody may wear a handsome fur collar in mid-October without appearing actually absurd, and very soon—the lover of furs ardently hopes—the air will be frosty enough to make fur wraps comfortable.

Novel Effects Ready For The New Season.

It is marvelous what the furriers have done this year with furs. Familiar pelts are used in new and interesting ways, and several unfamiliar pelts have come to the front to take a high place in fashion. The use of fur in waistcoats is a feature of the season. These waistcoats, set in wraps and coats of seal, chinchilla and velvet, are usually of some effectively patterned pelt like leopard, chinchilla, faded ermine or the new Russian mouse which is surprisingly like the coat of the humble American chipmunk which disappears along the fence rails in New England. There is a veritable craze for kolinsky and, fortunately, because of the favor its appearance in a few exclusive garments caused last winter, a quantity of this fur was secured before the beginning of the war in Europe. A cape of kolinsky is pictured, and naturally this is a very expensive garment, not only because of the Siberian fur of which it is built, but also because of its smart and modern style. The cape is in ripple cut, nearly two dozen hand-made fur tails dangle from the lower edge. At the front is a waistcoat of kolinsky with deep revers of seal, ermine, and there is also a collar of kolinsky faced with ermine.

The kolinsky wrap completes a very charming costume in the fashionable dark brown tones of the season. The wrap, by its cut, reveals much of the skirt of a tulle de negre with and elegant ermine cape, the pleated skirt being of the ermine. A tulle of tulle de negre velvet has a rose of gold lace at the front.

Muskrat Masquerades As Seal.

Three-fourths of the new "seal-skin" coats and capes are of muskrat, more commonly known as Hudson Bay seal. This pelt, when dyed to a rich, dark brown color, is exceedingly handsome and is more durable than genuine seal, which must often visit the renovator to have rubbed patches repaired. A well-cut wrap of dyed muskrat costs a substantial price, but is well worth the money; and of course there is no comparison between its cost and the cost of a similar garment of red seal. Some of the high-class furriers are making a specialty of rather short fur coats—no more than thirty-four or thirty-six inches long, with belts set at a low waistline. These short fur coats are youthful and jaunty in effect, but are becoming to slender women only, although for some unexplainable reason stout women seem to prefer them fervently.

More appropriate to lines that lean to embonpoint are the graceful capes which fall between hip and knee. Such a cape, of Hudson Bay seal, or dyed muskrat, is pictured. A feature of its smartness is the waistcoat of Russian mouse. This waistcoat buttons up close to the throat and protects the chest perfectly. The seal cape may be buttoned across it on very cold days. Do not overlook the curved pockets at either side of the waistcoat. They are outlined with the fine line of the seal and the waistcoat fastens with amber shell buttons.

In the better class of fur wraps the cape is a prevailing feature, but when winter winds blow, a cape is more comfortable in a blouse than on the street, and it is notable that in popular priced fur wearables there are more coats than capes. Sometimes the back of the coat is cut in ripple effect which suggests the cape idea, while the fronts fasten trimly in coat fashion. All sorts of sleeves are shown, from close-fitting coat sleeves to wide sling-sleeves, and bishop sleeves gathered into a frill at the wrist.

Ruffles of Fur.
Pleated frills and whole flounces of fur are among the surprises in fur wearables this autumn. New coats of seal, broadtail and muskrat, have rippling flounces of the pelt set on below a wide belt, and some of the cape effects are so full and rippling that an enormous amount of fur is required to make them. The broadtail, with its rippled ends, or gauntlets, is particularly stunning, and fur frills on the sleeves are quite the usual thing.

Summer Ermine and Monkey Create A Furor.

Even more fashionable than snow white ermine is the fur of the monkey. This summer ermine which is a delicate brown in color. This is the shade of the seal ermine during the summer months when it runs about over bare rocks instead of through drifting snows. During the changing period the ermine is light brown streaked with white, and these streaked pelts are also high in fashion's favor.

Another fur which is a fad this season is monkey. Now no one, by any stretch of the imagination, can possibly call the straight, shiny, monkey pelt beautiful; but when it is smart, it is very smart indeed—and when it is not, it is horrid; exactly like the little girl in the familiar nursery rhyme. About twenty-five years ago monkey was the rage, and here it is again in high favor! The milliners are putting a fringe of monkey around sailor hats and the effect is too handsome to be described—at any rate this is not a military article. Monkey muffs are not so bad and a little monkey fur used judiciously on a frock of black chiffon, or even of pink chiffon, is rather effective. There are also little shoulder capes trimmed with monkey which will appeal to some women in conjunction with monkey muffs.

Mosaic Effects For The Evening.

Some very beautiful collarcoats and capes for evening wear have mosaic effects contrived by inserting one fur in another, in graceful designs. Notable among these is a cape of spotted ermine cut in three points and edged all around with fox. Within the fox border is a border design of kolinsky in conventional flower and leaf pattern, the points of the design running up into the cape of spotted ermine. About the neck is a wide band of seal and ermine are combined in similar manner and leopard is set into seal in mosaic effect. Such furs are of course extremely high in price as the work of setting one fur into another requires skilled and delicate handling.

An attractive little fur wrap of Russian mouse trimmed with mout-fur is pictured and the mout-fur matched Russian mouse will appeal to the woman searching for something entirely new and "different" in furs. This cape is intended for afternoon wear and its loose sleeves and full cut, with a close band at the hips, give it a dainty and dainty suggestion. The elongated muff with the striped Russian mouse running in transverse directions continues the line of the wrap downward at the front in becoming manner.

The New In Muffs And Neckpieces.

Fitch, which was enormously popular last winter, is still high in favor, but most of the new Fitch furs shown this fall are Russian imports. German Fitch is much finer and richer in quality, but of course German pelts are almost unobtainable these days and the Russian Fitch is about the only sort procurable in any quantity. The color of dark brown in muffs and frocks will make all the brown-toned furs fashionable; but Fitch is effective also with black and with other shades.

The mout-fur is the season's high-style fad, but the pillow and rug muffs also have their place in favor, and women who possess handsome muffs in these shapes will not be likely to have them made over. The striped pelt like chinchilla, Russian mouse and mink, lend themselves especially well to the mout style, and these smart muffs are made also of ermine, moleskin and seal. A tailored suit of dark gray velvet has a collar of ermine edged with skunk which crosses over the bust and extends downward around the waist to the back, where a cluster of brushes falls in rather an absurd suggestion of a tail. To match the collar there is a huge mout-muff of ermine with a border trimming of skunk at the ends.

Two typical new muff and neck-wear sets are illustrated. One set is of Australian opossum in combination with seal. The neckpiece is in the new ermine, or "labeled" style, and the seal buttons on neckpiece and muff enhance this tailored suggestion. The other set, of chinchilla—now a rare and high-priced fur—has a very graceful neckpiece in "semi-tailored" style and a draped muff lined with gray velvet. Inside the velvet lining is a roomy pocket in which small pictures and belongings may be carried very conveniently.

For motor wear leopard and racoon continue to be the favorites, and French elver is used to trim coats of dark worsted.

When the coat collar becomes soiled, it may be cleaned in this manner: Dissolve one part salt in four parts alcohol. Apply this mixture with a sponge and rub well.

Charming New Steps Taught at Dancing School

QUITE as important as the acquisition of a knowledge of the three "R's" or the rudiments of music, in the opinion of the fashionable mother, is a thorough training of the child in social amenities at dancing school. It is not vitally necessary that small John Henry and his sister, Mabel Elizabeth, shall become proficient performers of the Fox Trot, Lane Duck, Tango Hide and Huntation; but it is vitally important that they learn to enter and leave a crowded room gracefully, to bow correctly to a hostess, to sit will also come into contact with other little folks of the best social standing, and there is no wiser course for the newcomer in a good neighborhood to follow than to send the child to dance school. Some of the wealthiest dancing class will of course be required, but these need not cost a great deal of money. Some of the wealthiest little folks dress very simply for the dancing lesson, even when elaborate evening wear is worn at holiday parties and other affairs of a festive character. On the other hand, many mothers make a point of having their small daughters in party attire for the dancing lesson and the small girl who attends dancing school in her ordinary school frock of dark serge will feel rather out of the picture—and children are keenly sensitive about such matters.

A pretty frock of white embroidery, floor. Dancers who learn the first rudiments of the Terpsichorean art in high-heeled shoes are never as fairy-light and graceful as those who acquire the accomplishment young, and in regulation dancing slippers.

The little boy's dancing school costume includes his spic and span Sunday suit of dark blue or gun metal serge and a pair of patent leather dancing pumps which he wears with black silk stockings. Some mothers follow the English costume of dressing their small sons in black Eton coat, long trousers, white waistcoat and turnover collar, but this seems rather an affectation in America, where the small boy thus togged out feels miserable and justly rebellious when he happens to be the only being present thus arrayed.

Children acquire the one-step easily and it has been a pretty sight, this past summer, to see tots of three or four years swinging down the hotel ballroom in the fascinating one-step—and doing it perfectly, too. The hesitation waltz is more difficult for little feet, but the "hame duck" hesitation has many childish devotees. The tango has been taught successfully to many small people—the tango, that is, in its now inoffensive version, as graceful and beautiful in its way as the stately minuet. The two little people in the illustrations are doing the Maxixe—fashion's latest dance craze—and three novices in the dance are pictured. The heel and toe-step appeals particularly to children, since it is much like an ordinary romping step. Another illustration shows the dancers changing from this heel and toe movement to another phase of the Maxixe. A third picture shows the graceful swinging movement in which the outstretched arms rest fingertip-against-fingertip, as the dancers sway to and fro from the waist.

The heel and toe step of the Maxixe is not beyond youthful requirement.

still with repose and without fidgeting, and to gain control of their legs, arms, feet and hands so that no drawing room and no assemblage, later on in life, may have any terrors of embarrassment for them.

The child who is a regular attendant at dancing school is seldom awkward or ill-mannered in older years. A respect for the little courtesies, the give and take of politeness which weaves together the threads of the social fabric in harmony and smoothness of dancing is seldom lacking. The making of the future finished gentleman or gentlewoman, of polite, gracefulness of carriage, and a gentle courtesy of address are the things John Henry and Mabel Elizabeth go to dancing-school to learn. Incidentally, they may become adepts at one-stepping and hesitating, and may even become proficient in solo dancing to the lameasurable pride of their fond mothers.

It is always a pretty sight to see a child dance—if unconscious joy and not the desire to "show off" is the motif power of the dance. The togged-out little puppet who proudestly complacently and self-consciously "arises" the apologetic grown-ups is rather a pathetic little spectacle—to the lover of the genuine in childhood; and when the small dancer attempts to mimic some of the movements and figure contortions of professional dancers whom she has been taken to see, the effect is far more painful than pathetic.

Since the most important feature of dancing school is the cultivation of manners, the very best dancing master procurable should be employed. At a first-rate dancing class the child will not only learn the new steps in the conventional and reserved way they are danced at refined assemblies, but he will also become accustomed to the manners and usages in vogue at such assemblies—the things a well-bred person, youthful or adult, may not do when out in formal company. He or of lawn and lace with a wide slash, will be correct and appropriate for dancing class if the little girl is under ten years old. Girls of ten to thirteen may wear frocks of chaille, light tinted silk, pongee or silk poplin, smartly made but not over-trimmed. Girls over the teen should be dressed with even greater simplicity—they may not wear the frills and ribbons with which the baby girl is decked out at any educational session, whether music, French or the hesitation waltz is the study concerned.

Feeble ballet slippers are the best choice for the little girl who will learn to depend on her own supple toes and flexible foot muscles for support in the dance rather than on heels which help to lift her foot from the

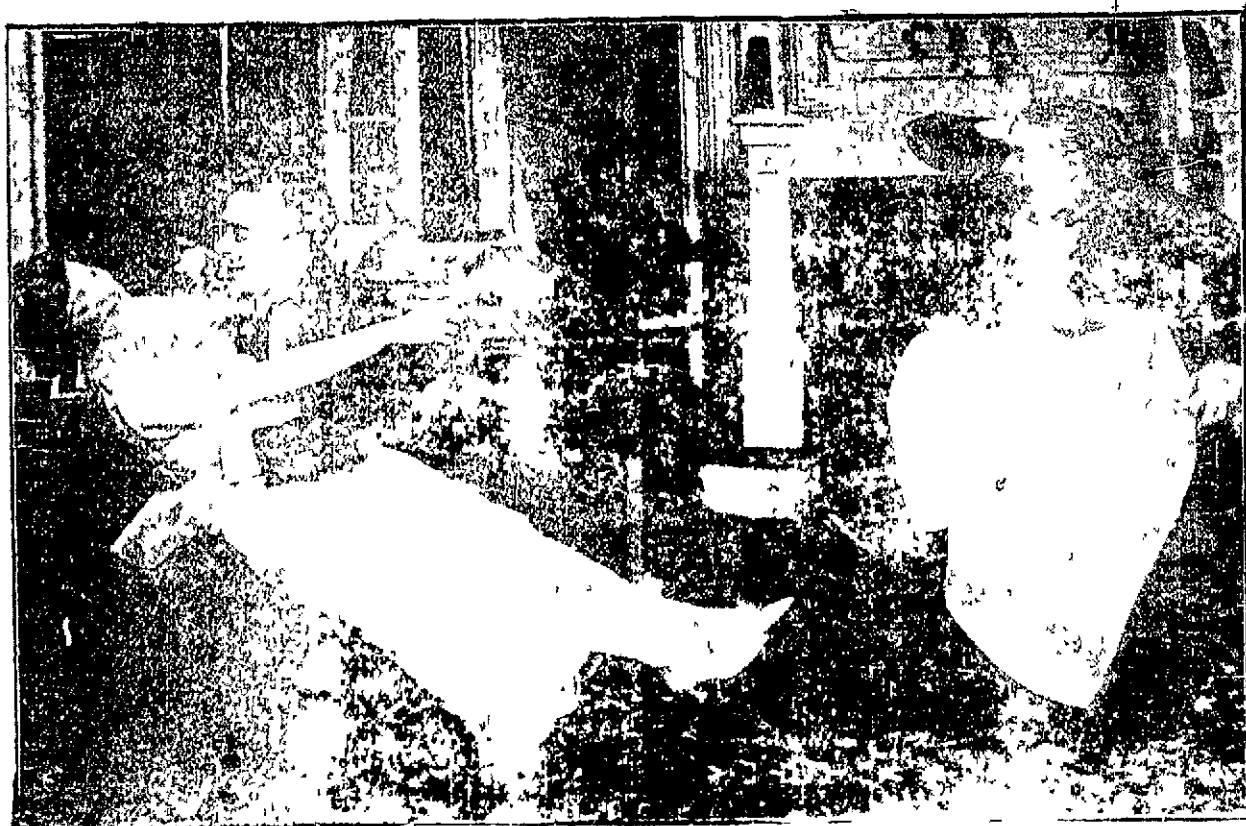

A graceful climax.

New Motor Dressing Case Serves As Foot Rest

ONE of the clever new devices for the motorist's comfort is a roomy dressing-case which holds everything necessary for an overnight trip—or even for two or three days—and which repays in the car beneath its possessor's feet. This dressing-case is shaped something like an ordinary suitcase, except that the cover slants downward toward the front and is padded, to afford comfortable resting place for the feet, in the transverse inside the case are brushes, comb, a good-sized mirror, toilet water flask, soap and tooth-powder holders which are strapped to the sides of the case. In the center is space for nightdress slippers and a soft negligee. But the feature of the case is a tray of white enamel which may be taken out and used as a washbasin; when other means of freshening up en route are not at hand.
